The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless - Claim 1-4,7,10 and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102b as being anticipated by Harada. Harada teaches a stacked piezoelectric device comprising layers of piezoelectric material interleaved with layers of internal electrodes. Harada teaches that the electrode material can be copper and that during manufacture the device is subjected to heat and pressure so that the surfaces of the electrodes (the skin layer) achieve this a liquid phase and reacts with the piezoelectric ceramic, while the core of the electrode layer remains in the solid phase (see col.7 ln68-col. 8,ln29 and col. 9 ln16-19)

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 5,6,8 and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Harada. Harada discloses the use of copper alloy for the electrode material but does not specify any particular percentage of copper. Harada also fails to explicitly teach any particular dimensions for the diffusion layer created by the liquid phase electrode reacting with the preselected electric ceramic. However, it has long been held that selection from among known materials and optimization of a known structure are within the skill expected of the routineer. Thus, to provide specific optimum dimensions and select from specific materials would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art.
